CURRIES Announces the Launch of the KD SideLight Frame

Mason City, IA - December 18, 2009 - A common problem with the installation of a sidelight opening in buildings is transporting the complete frame unit to the opening. CURRIES is pleased to announce the KD SideLight Frame. This is a drywall sidelight unit that can be assembled and installed at the opening without having to weld the frame pieces together and transport them to various levels of a building. There are no more concerns of fitting the welded frame in the elevator or through doorways of a building.

“Commercial construction is a challenging endeavor,” says Dan Glover, Product Manager for the Door Group. “Our challenge is to develop innovative products that reduce or eliminates the common problems of building construction. The KD SideLight helps solve one of these common problems - transportation of the complete frame unit to the opening. One of the best features of the KD SideLight is that it is elevator friendly; components easily navigate narrow corridors and pieces assemble without welding. This saves time, labor and transportation costs. Job site flexibility and maneuverability make this frame ideal for multi-level projects... problem solved.”

The CURRIES KD SideLight Frame is designed to use common hand tools for installation in a matter of minutes in a rough opening. The complete frame bundle can be carried to the specified opening and installed in a very short time, saving both labor and transportation cost.

The CURRIES KD SideLight Frame is also available in any of the 1900 Pantone factory painted prefinish colors. Visit www.curries.com for more information, including an instructional video about this product or contact your local ASSA ABLOY Door Security Solutions sales team.
